BUREAU FRAUD FORUM

What the World Can Learn from India's Approach to Fraud and Inclusion

India has built one of the most inclusive digital banking ecosystems in the world—bringing millions into formal finance through real-time payments, digital identity, and instant access to financial services. This level of inclusion materially changes how fraud shows up: greater exposure to social engineering, faster mule network formation, blurred lines between first-party and third-party fraud, and fraud that cuts across onboarding, payments, lending, servicing, and collections.

What's notable is not the presence of fraud, but how India is responding. Guided by proactive direction from the Reserve Bank of India, recent directions signal a clear shift from static, rule-based compliance to continuous, risk-based, and adaptive controls that recognise fraud as a system-wide problem, not an isolated event.

Objective

This Banking Leadership Dinner, the Bureau Fraud Forum brings together senior practitioners across fraud, risk, collections, digital banking, data, and technology to examine how new fraud modes are emerging in highly inclusive systems and what global markets can learn from India's regulatory and operating responses as safety and access are pursued together.

The evening will include short keynotes, a moderated fireside chat, and open, off-the-record conversations, followed by dinner, allowing experienced leaders to exchange practical perspectives on fraud, inclusion, and regulation.

A series of candid, off-the-gatherings that spotlight real stories from the frontlines of fraud prevention, explore emerging threats, and explore what's actually working in the field.
